
When I was 15, I had a part time job during the holidays packaging up various meat and cheese gifts to ship around the country. It was after school three days a week and one weekend day. I didn't love the job, but I had to have a part-time job, so it worked. Gary, my boss, seemed like an alright guy. But I may have confused his authority with being smart and cool, which I guess just happens when you're young. He was like that guy that always comes back to the high school after he graduates to hang out with people younger then him. Gary was 38.

One night, when he and I were the last of three or four employees working the closing shift, he came up close behind me and in a sort of whisper, said, "Have you ever heard the saying, 'Lovers Tonight, Friends Tomorrow?'" I turned around and looked at his smiling face and told him I hadn't – because I hadn't.

For the rest of my shift, every time I made eye contact with him, he smiled at me. It didn't mean much to me at the time. I did recognize that he was acting weird, but not so weird that I thought about it for more then a moment here and there. On the drive home from work, I asked my mom if she had ever heard the phrase.

"Did you hear it in a song or something?" she asked.

"No, Gary asked me that tonight." To this day, I have wished for some sort of surveillance tape to recapture that brake slide my mom did in the Ford Grenada. We went straight off Torrance Boulevard into a dirt lot. It was some of the nicest driving I have ever been a part of. When the car stopped skidding and came to a stop, my mom looked over at me, bright red and furious and yelled, "Gary said what to you!?" I tried to tell her to calm down, but she insisted on the exact play-by-play of the events with Gary. I told her the whole story and answered dozens of questions about anything he had ever said to me in the past, where he was standing when he asked me, if he had ever touched me and on and on. There was a part of me that was embarrassed for what she might do, but there was a bigger part of me that was really scared for Gary. We drove back to work but it was closed up. The ride home and the rest of the evening were silent. The next day when I woke up for school, my mom was still as pissed as the night before. I said as little as possible to her and just went to school. That day, I thought it might be a good idea to ask my brother to drive me to work, so when I got home from school, I suggested it to my mom.

"You don't need a ride because you don't work there anymore. And neither does that son of a bitch, Gary."

I still don't know what she said to him, if she even spoke to him, or any of the details. But I never pass that area on Torrance boulevard without thinking about what an awesome driver my mom was. And how creepy guys can be.

WHAT TOUR? WHAT LOGO?

The beauty of going on a trip is a lot of the facts become a blur.

Questions like, "Is today Wednesday or Thursday?" and "What city are we in?" are as common on the road as buying aviator shades at a gas station or shooting the TM with a Roman candle. Part of the confusion derives from the disruption of your normal day to day with a barrage of new experiences. You can't go to your local Starbucks first thing in the morning so you make do by sucking hotel room coffee through a fudge Tim Tam. Cramming in the planes rides, mini bars, new spots, and new faces makes time run at a different speed, a slower speed. What happened just two days prior feels like it took place more like last week. That being said, the trip we made to Australia this past September now seems like ancient history. I don't recall if the brick banks we skated were in Canberra or the Gold Coast? Did Smyth throw up in the bushes in Adelaide or Perth? It's these momentary losses of memory that made me forget my iPod on the plane to Sydney, or was it Brisbane?

As a refresher for the team we decided to give them a multiple-choice quiz about the tour. The trip took us from Melbourne to Perth and was centered around two art shows featuring painted wooden OG dolls by the Girl Art Dump and friends, but don't ask me to mention all their names. I can't remember.

devine calloway

How do you pronounce your first name?
It's pronounced dee-vine.

Why do people call you Devon?
I just got tired of people asking me which way to say it, so I was like, "Just call me Devon." It's easier that way.

How old are you?
I'm 20. I'm getting up there. It sucks I wish I was younger.

How did you get on Chocolate?
Through Lee Smith and Sam Smyth.

Who told you that you were on the team?
We were at dinner on the Canada tour and Sam said welcome to the team. Everyone else said the same thing. It felt great.

What was going on in between City Stars and Chocolate?
It was like a year and a half of scraping by. Just trying to survive. I was selling whatever product I had left over. I was filming and trying to stay in it.

Has this been a busy year for you?
Yeah, I've been working on videos and going on tours, you name it.

Is being busy better than scraping by?
It's better now. Back then I was just hoping I'd have a board and hoping that my board would last. I was trying to stay in my apartment without having to move back home. My roommate helped me out a bunch.

Do you miss the dreads?
Sometimes, I used to just be able to wake up and go. Now I gotta look in the mirror and make sure my edge is up nice.

Did you see someone with dreads that made you want to grow yours out?
I kind of liked Brandon Turner's. He kinda inspired me to get them.

What made you cut them?
They were too long and getting in my face when I was skating.

What's your next hair move?
Maybe a Mohawk. I've been thinking about it. Rock it for a week or two. Maybe a Mr. T.

Who's the hotness?
Aquil Brathwaite from New York. And my brother…I'm feeling everybody man. Everybody is pretty tight.
